

James W. Parker - Bio

Jim Parker, founder and owner of Riverview Studios, is an internationally acclaimed, award winning 42 year veteran filmmaker. He has produced numerous broadcast programs for Public Television including weekly episodes of Reporter's Roundtable and On the Record with Michael Aron, The Spark with Marie DeNoia Aronson, and he is co-creator of Atlantic City Nights. Clients like Tyco International and Integra LifeSciences have sent him around the world to Singapore, throughout Europe, Canada and the US to document their scientific achievements and success stories, and his non-profit work has taken him to Sarajevo, Albania, India, Kenya and frequently to Uganda. During his career he has produced hundreds of successful multi-lingual documentary programs for corporate and non-profit clients.

Mr. Parker believes in the power of the documentary film as a means to tell stories of hope and success. "People want to have something to believe in, and they want to support projects which will succeed. By telling the stories of an organization's successes through real people, viewers can empathize with the people in the story, and empathy is the key to motivating them into involvement. Crispr Insider is exciting because it gives us a platform to share breakthrough scientific achievements in understandable terms with a global audience."
